what are human services?

- Services for those in need that lead to self-sufficiency with dignity
- Serving the underserved population in a way that provides an individual the opportunity for a better future and has a positive outcome for the community
- Services that fulfill vital needs for a person to maintain both mental and physical health, which contributes to the health of the community
- Providing support to the most vulnerable; the underserved and underrepresented. Typically low-income, senior citizens, at-risk youth and those with disabilities

HUMAN SERVICES FINAL RECOMMENDATIONS for fiscal year 2012/13

Tempe Community Council (TCC) announces a change in the Agency Review process. The TCC Board of Directors worked with staff to identify a continuum of service which will help the human services funding deliver greater strategic impact. Our intent is that Tempe will offer the highest quality, most efficient and effective human service system for its residents. This is a system that assists individuals, seniors, families and children that are facing crisis, to move from the crisis experience to stability, and continue on to self-sufficiency without slipping back into crisis. This continuum of service, guided by well researched “collective impact” strategies, will help Tempe’s investment in human service programs offer long-term impact for all residents.
